Section 12.21], these orders apply to Minnesota State employees including faculty and staff and will impact students.

III. Impact and Definitions:

Weather and Short-Term Emergency Closings:

One or more of the following decisions could be made by the College President or designee using one or a combination of the following scenarios when the conditions that warrant a short-term emergency require such.

A. Close All College Operations. The following conditions apply.

- a. When the College buildings have not opened and full operations have not commenced, regardless of the work locations and modality of instruction for faculty, staff or students, all employees work and students classes are cancelled for the period of the declared short-term emergency. In this instance, employees deemed essential may be required to report for some or all of their scheduled work shift to maintain on-going and essential operations of the college buildings and maintenance.

B. Early Closure: Early closure refers to when the College buildings have opened and are operational, employees who are scheduled to work on campus have reported to work on campus, students are on campus for instruction and other purposes or activities, and if conditions exist or materialize to conditions that are predicted to pose a risk to the safe travel for employees and students back home, a decision of early closure is made at the earliest time possible to accommodate employees and students safe travel home. The following conditions apply.

- a. At the time that is indicated for the early closure, all on-campus classes are cancelled, and all on-campus events and activities will be cancelled for the remainder of the day and/or evening. Depending on the time of closure and conditions that prompt the closure, evening schedules/shifts for essential employees who are on campus and those who have not yet reported to work may be adjusted. Essential employees will be notified of their work status by the CFO/Vice President of Finance and Administration.
- b. Per Board Policy, employees who can work or are scheduled to work remotely on this day, faculty who are scheduled to teach online (synchronous or asynchronous) or an online session of a hybrid course, and students who are scheduled in online (synchronous or asynchronous) or online session of a hybrid courses for the day, an early closure has no impact as the conditions that caused the early closure do not apply due to no safety risk to employees whose work can be performed in a location off-campus and to students whose learning environment is occurring online are presumed a safe place to perform such work or learning. As such, work will continue for employees working remotely, instruction will continue for online and hybrid classes, and students are expected to continue classes (synchronous or asynchronous online; online session of hybrid classes) as scheduled.

C. Delayed Opening: Delayed opening refers to adjusting the time the College buildings will open on any given day due to early weather conditions that may prompt or a shorter-term period of closure. There may be times when a delayed open is required to give employees and students more time to travel to campus safely. Essential employees will be notified of their time to report if their shift is impacted by the delay.

- a. At the time that is scheduled for the College building to open for the delayed opening, classes scheduled on campus will begin at the next available schedule block closest to the time the College building will open. Students are expected to attend all classes for the day when the College building opens regardless of modality and follow their course syllabus attendance requirements. Work and classes will start and continue at the scheduled time.
- b. Employees are expected to report to work by the time the College building is open under this condition or employees must request and take appropriate leave. Should employees wish not to report to work at the delayed start time on campus, appropriate leave must be requested and approved. Should students wish not to attend classes, the attendance policy for the course or any exceptions to such resides with the faculty. Faculty who are scheduled to teach a class that is scheduled once the College building is open and who chooses to cancel the class must take the appropriate steps of notification of the class cancellation and take appropriate leave. The delayed opening of the physical College building does not impact online or hybrid classes (synchronous or asynchronous online; online sessions of hybrid classes) or remote work as work and learning can occur as scheduled in a safe environment during the period of the delayed opening. As such, work will continue for employees working remotely, instruction will continue for online and hybrid classes, and students are expected to continue classes (synchronous or asynchronous online; online session of hybrid classes) as scheduled.

D. No Closure Decision:

- a. There may be times when the College building will remain open and classes are cancelled. In this case, the cancellation of classes does not excuse any employee from work if the College building remains open.
- b. There may be times when the College building will remain open and the College may cancel activities or events held on campus even when classes are not cancelled. In this case, the cancellation of events and activities does not excuse any employee from work if the College building remains open.
- c. Any employee may choose not to report to work based on their own personal reasons. In such cases, employees must follow the same procedures for an absence at work, such as faculty must follow all notification protocols about the class cancellation, staff or faculty report absence from work to their supervisor, and staff or faculty must use appropriate leave.
